WOODROW WILSON MADE PRESIDENT

Many Thousands Witness His Induction Into Highest Office

CEREMONIES, IMPRESSIVE.

New Executive of Nation Takes Oath on East Portico of Capitol After Marshall Becomes Vice-President.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington, March 4.—Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey is president of the United States and Thomas Riley Marshall of Indiana is vice-president. The instant that the oath-taking ceremonies at noon today in front of the capitol were completed, the Democratic party of this country "came into its own" again after an absence of sixteen years from the precincts of executive power.

A throng of many thousands of people witnessed the newly elected president's induction into office. Nineteenth of the members of the crowd were enthusiastically joyful, the other tenth cheered with them, as becoming good American citizens watching a governmental change ordered in accordance with the law and the Constitution.

The Bible which during each successive four years is kept as one of the treasures of the Supreme court, was the immediate instrument of the oath taking of Woodrow Wilson. Edward Douglass White, chief justice of the United States, held the Book for Mr. Wilson to rest his hands upon while he made solemn covenant to support the Constitution and the laws of the United States, and to fulfill the duties of his office as well and as faithfully as it lay within his power to do.

Thomas Riley Marshall swore fealty to the Constitution and to the people in the senate chamber, where for four years it will be his duty to preside over the deliberations of the members of the upper house of congress.

Ceremonies Simple and Impressive. Both of the ceremonies proper were conducted in a severely simple but most impressive manner. The surroundings of the scene of the president's induction into office, however, were not so simple, for it was an out-of-door event and the great gathering of military, naval and uniformed civil organizations gave much more than a touch of splendor to the scene.

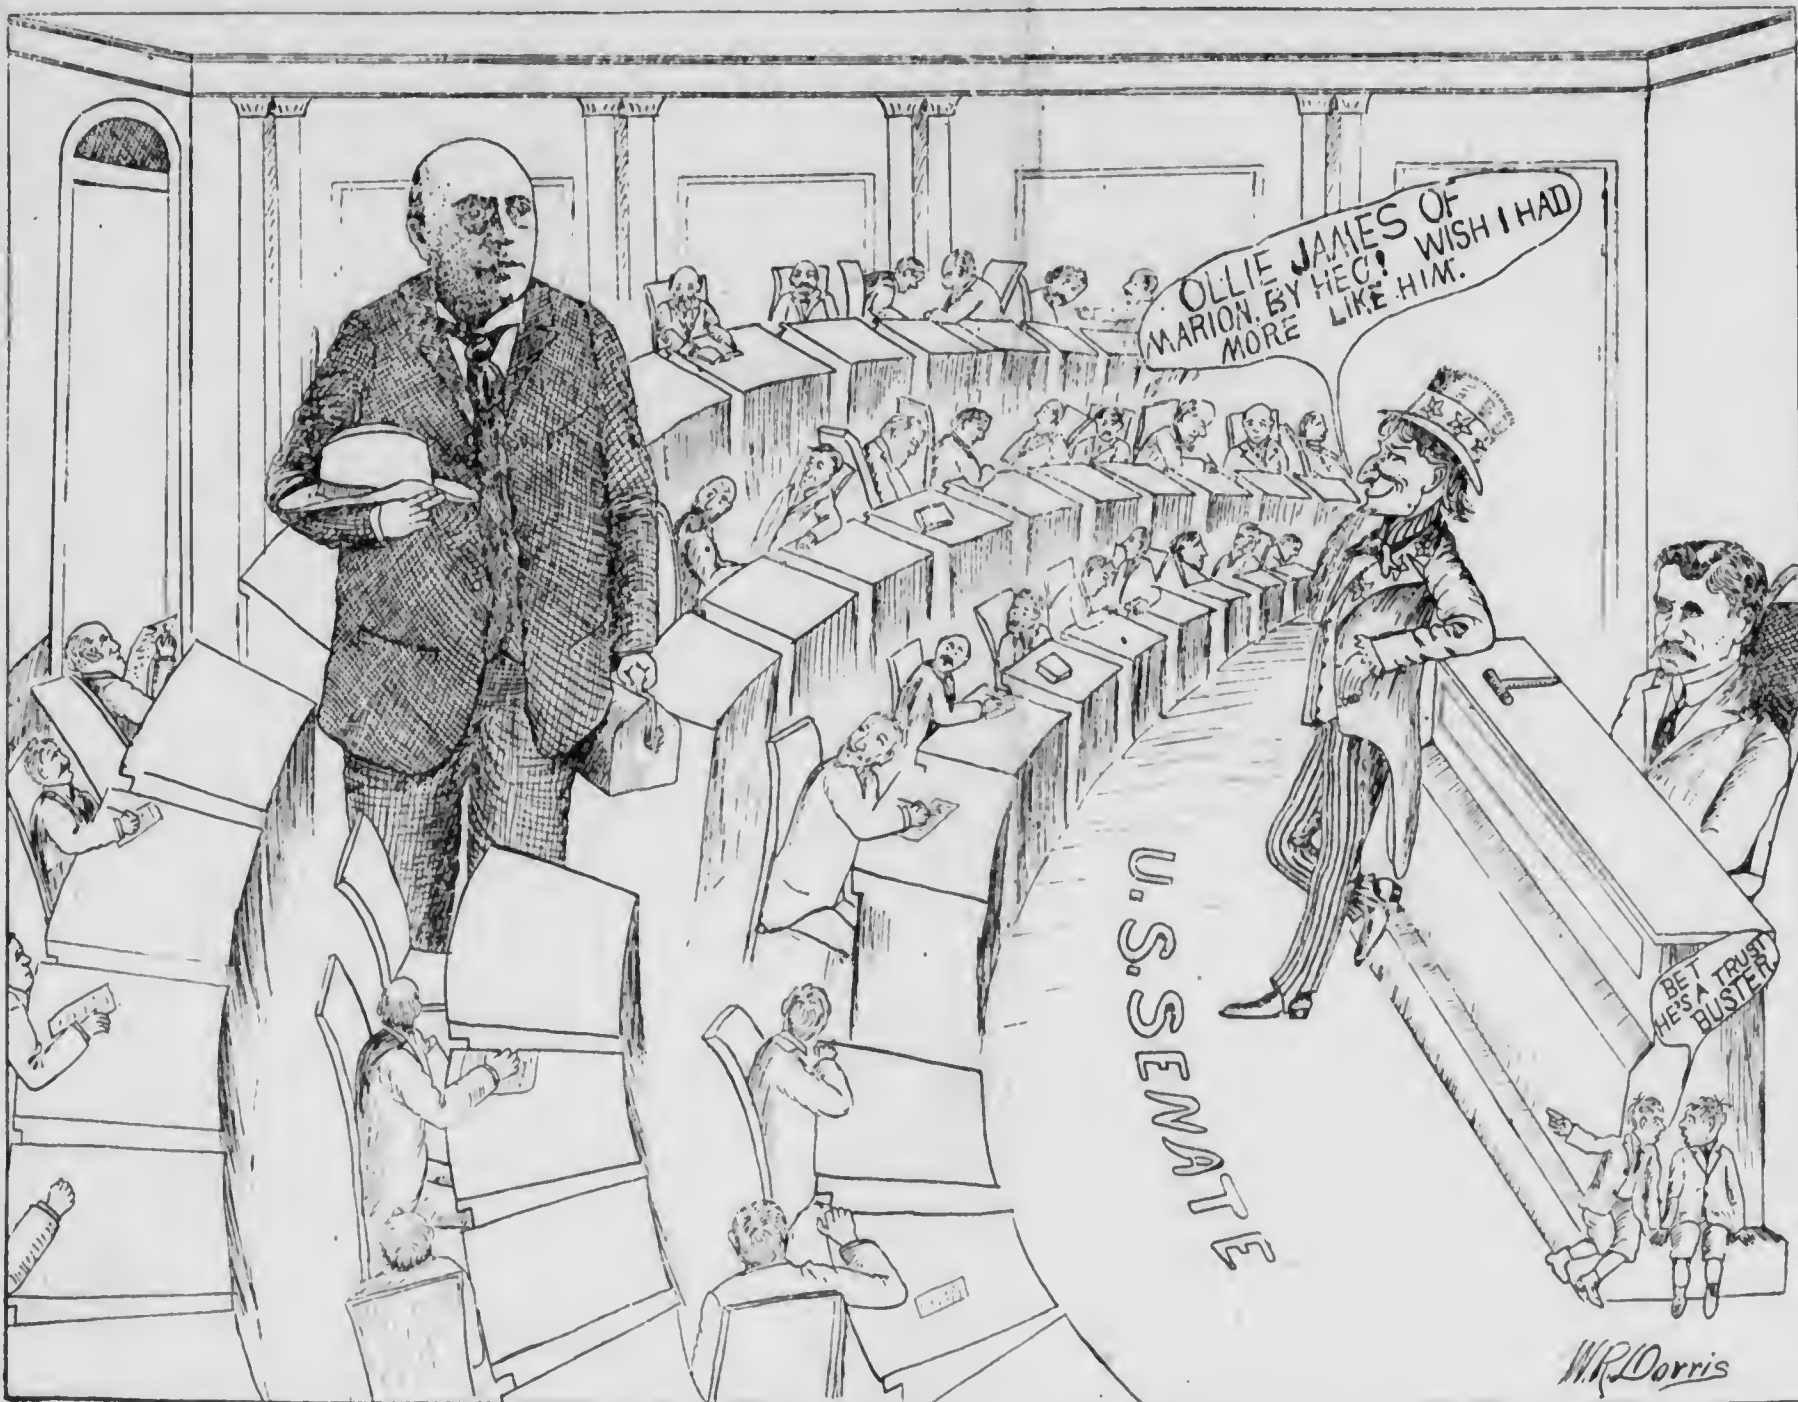

In the senate chamber, where the oath was taken by the man now vice-president of the United States, there were gathered about 2,000 people, all that the upper house will contain without the risk of danger because of the rush and press of the multitudes. It is probable that nowhere else in the United States at any time are there gathered an equal number of men and women whose names are so widely known. The gathering in the senate chamber and later on the east portico of the capitol was composed largely of those prominent for their services in America, and in part of foreigners who have secured places for their names in the current history of the world's doings.

Arranged by Congress.

The arrangements of the ceremonies for the inauguration of Woodrow Wilson and Thomas Riley Marshall were made by the joint committee on arrangements of congress. The senate section of this committee was ruled by a majority of Republicans, but there is Democratic testimony to the fact that the Republican senators were willing to outdo their Democratic brethren in the work of making orderly and impressive the inauguration.

When Ollie Entered The United States Senate.

Our Ollie is Sworn in.

Washington, March 4.—With William Jennings Bryan looking on and beaming and in the presence of the Governor of Kentucky and members of the state delegation in Congress, Ollie M.

James today was administered the oath as senator of the United States. Mrs. James and a small family party gazed down happily from the galleries as the great form of the new Senator strode down the center aisle arm-in-arm with Senator Bradley. In the chamber at the time was C. C. McClard, interstate commissioner, appointed from Kentucky. Exactly at 12:45 o'clock when the name of Mr. James was called and he with Senator Bradley advanced to the chair. There was a stir in the cabinet circles all of whom knew the big Kentuckian. The galleries craned their necks to see the contrast in size between the two Kentuckians. They returned to their places soon and it was all over.

OLLIE ATTAINS HIS ZENITH.

The Old Days at Frankfort Where He Began His Career.

Ed. Leigh, of the Bowling Green Messenger, who was on the scene during the time he recalls, writes interestingly of the old days at Frankfort. He says:

"Senator James began the building of his career back in the days when he was a legislature page. A page is supposed to wait on the members, but there is always plenty of time for the boys to listen to the debates. This some of them took advantage of, while the most of them did not. Senator James did.

"In the House were Speaker Johnson, our own Will Cox, Meyer Weil, Evan Settle, Theodore Hallam, Harvey Meyers, and a host of bright men who discussed measures from the standpoint of statesmen.

"In the Senate there was grouped as great a body of men as ever assembled in any deliberative body on earth. Among these were Cassius M. Clay, Robert Breckinridge, James Mulligan, Laban T. Moors, D. W. Wright, David H. Smith, J. W. Bryan, John K. Hendrick, Samuel English, William Goebel, then beginning a political career that was so shortly to be ended by an assassin. Senator Dickerson, who succeeded Carlisle in Congress, was a member of the body. William Lindsey, afterward United States Senator, represented the Frankfort district. The Democratic party had not then been torn by dissensions and the biggest men in the party consented to serve."

Made a Noise as They Sped Through Blue Grass Capital

The "Ollie James Special" over the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, passed through Lexington Friday night at 8:40 o'clock. The party was due in Lexington at 11:40 this morning, but missed connections at Louisville, due to the lateness of the Illinois Central train in reaching the Falls City, where the cars in the special were transferred to the Chesapeake & Ohio tracks.

S. Price, a senior at State University, was the only Marion man in Lexington who met the train here, but a large crowd of big Ollie's admirers in this city and county was on hand to see the special go through. —Lexington Herald.

EDGAR JAMES NEXT U. S. MARSHAL

Rumors Say Ollie's Brother Will Succeed Long.

According to rumors current in Western Kentucky, Edgar James of Kuttawa, brother of United States Senator Ollie M. James, is stated for the appointment as United States marshal. He is regarded as having the best opportunity to succeed Marshal George W. Long, of Leitchfield, and would make a splendid official. There are fewer applicants for the position of United States marshal for Kentucky than any other job within the gift of the Democrats and it is said that Edgar James has the job nailed down. Senator James certainly has the right to nail it down for anybody he selects, and a brother stands mighty close.

From State College Notes in Lexington Herald.

F. Julius Fohs, former assistant geologist on the Kentucky Geological Survey and at present consulting mining geologist and engineer, is considered the greatest authority on baryte and fluor spar deposits in the United States. Mr. Fohs will discuss "Evacuation of Mine Properties."

Brother Thompson's Son.

After six years' service, A. B. Thompson has resigned as cashier of the Citizens Bank of Kuttawa, and will leave in a short time for Montrose, Ark., where he has purchased an interest in a mercantile store. He is well known in Lyan county. —Paducah Sun.

RAILROAD GETTING CLOSE TO CARRSVILLE

Gulf Lines Railroad Co. Negotiating for Depot Site and Switchyard at Rosiclare.

From correspondence shown us it would seem that the Gulf Lines Connecting Railroad Co. is trying to make some satisfactory arrangements for depot site, switch yards and terminal facilities at Rosiclare. The location as outlined and practically asked for is on the East side of Main street, on the Northern boundary of the village. This location would seem to be ideal for the purpose and we think that all concessions asked will be cheerfully granted by the owners of the property in question. Each day developments seem to make it more certain that "Little Hardin" is really to have a railroad in the not very distant future. —Hardin Independent.

ARE HAVING A GRAND TIME.

Buffet Luncheon Tendered Members of "Ollie James Special"

The members of the "Ollie James Special" from Marion and surrounding towns had the day of their lives. First the Senator elect had them all to a buffet luncheon in his apartments. There were nearly two score of them, but Mrs. James, Misses Lizzie and Ruby James and Miss Nancy Johnson, daughter of Representative Ben Johnson, served them bountifully. Mr. James then brought the whole party to the Capital, where he showed them the building and put them all in the galleries, although the doorkeepers insisted there was no room.

"These fellows got in," remarked Mr. James "finally. They're the salt of the earth. They're the men who fight my battles for me."

The party is composed of the following:—Circuit Judge J. F. Gordon, Madisonville; John L. Grayot, Smithland; Chas. Pepper, J. R. Wylie and J. H. Williams, Princeton; Edgar James (brother of the Senator-elect) Jerry Black and M. E. Sexton, Kuttawa; T. H. Cochran, Senator P. S. Maxwell, H. K. Woods, W. G. Clifton, C. J. Pierce, Sam Guggenheim, William Barnett, J. W. Wilson, J. H. Orme, Wm. Rochester, E. J. Hayward, Dr. W. F. Nunn all of Marion, and W. E. Dowell, Forest Harris P. B. Croft, of Tolu, Crittenden county and R. E. Dowell, of Wichita, Kan. —Washington Dispatch to the Courier-Journal.

PRES. WILSON IS FOR JUSTICE ONLY

His Inaugural Address Calls on All
Honest Men to Aid in His Task

WILL RESTORE, NOT DESTROY

New Chief Executive Says Change of Government Means the Nation Is Using Democratic Party for Large and Definite Purpose.

Washington, March 4.—Looking upon the victory of the Democratic party as the mandate of the nation to correct the evils that have been allowed to grow up in our national life, President Wilson in his inaugural address today called on all honest men to assist him in carrying out the will of the people. Following is his address:

There has been a change of government. It began two years ago, when the house of representatives became Democratic by a decisive majority. It has now been completed. The senate about to assemble will also be Democratic. The offices of president and vice-president have been put into the hands of Democrats. What does the change mean? That is the question that is uppermost in our minds today. That is the question I am going to try to answer, in order, if I may, to interpret the occasion.

New Insight into Our Life.

It means much more than the mere success of a party. The success of a party means little except, when the nation is using that party for a large and definite purpose. No one can mistake the purpose for which the nation now seeks to use the Democratic party. It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view. Some old things with which we had grown familiar, and which had begun to creep into the very habit of our thought and of our lives, have altered their aspect as we have latterly looked critically upon them, with fresh, awakened eyes; have dropped their disguises and shown themselves alien and sinister. Some new things, as we look frankly upon them, willing to comprehend their real character, have come to assume the aspect of things long believed in and familiar, stuff of our own convictions. We have been refreshed by a new insight into our own life.

We see that in many things that life is very great. It is incomparably great in its material aspects, in its body of wealth, in the diversity and sweep of its energy, in the industries which have been conceived and built up by the genius of individual men and the limitless enterprise of groups of men. It is great, also, very great, in its moral force. Nowhere else in the world have noble men and women exhibited in more striking form the beauty and energy of sympathy and helpfulness and counsel in their efforts to rectify wrong, alleviate suffering, and set the weak in the way of strength and hope. We have built up, moreover, a great system of government, which has stood through a long age as in many respects a model for those who seek to set liberty upon foundations that will endure against fortuitous change, against storm and accident. Our life contains every great thing, and contains it in rich abundance.

Human Cost Not Counted.

But the evil has come with the good, and much fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come in excusable waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used, and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature, without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent, scornful to be careful, shamefully prodigal as well as admirably efficient. We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through. The groans and agony of it all had not yet reached our ears, the solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat. With the great government went many deep secret things which we too long delayed to look into and scrutinize with candid, fearless eyes. The great government we loved has too often been made use of for private and selfish purposes, and those who used it had forgotten the people.

At last a vision has been vouchsafed us of our life as a whole. We see the bad with the good, the debased and decadent with the sound and vigorous. We cannot turn back. Continued on Page 4.

LESTER BRYANT

When the state champions met in Washington this winter with the experts who had charge of the work in the various states, there was naturally a feeling of intense rivalry. Twelve of the southern states that had been pushing the Boys' Corn club idea for several years, had records of 442 boys that had grown over 100 bushels on an acre. Alabama and Georgia each had over 1000 boys with this record to their credit, but both of these states had been organized for club work for the past eight years. It is very gratifying to be able to write that Kentucky, with an organization of only two years, made a splendid record. Fifty-seven boys in Kentucky this past season grew over 100 bushels of corn to the acre. How many adult farmers did that well?

CHASED BY THE SHERIFF

(Reported by R. C. Haynes.)

"The good Squire Brownlow," continued Zebulum, "in his excitement over the narrow escape of his only daughter, was scarcely conscious, I think, of the fact that he was still holding Nell in his arms as he took away toward the house. No doubt the Squire, for the time being, had forgotten the lapse of some seventeen years and imagined himself walking back and forth across his room at one o'clock a. m., dressed only in his night robes, barefooted, stepping on all loose tacks on the floor and with the fumes of pargoric penetrating his nostrils. I expected him any moment to break forth into melody to the strains of 'Rock-a-baby, baby, you're in the tree top.'"

"Anyway, the picture we presented as we marched, as before said, in single file, from the road to the house, did not show up, in many respects, with the picture I had often painted in my imagination of the happy return of the triumphant bridegroom, his bride hanging timidly but confidently to his arm. Yet, I reflected, it might have been worse, and I consoled myself with the thought that I was married just the same, and that I was not, after all, the scoundrel who struck Bobby Broadway.

"As I was in the rear of the procession, I was, of course, the last to reach the house; and, as I came to the porch, I stopped a minute or two to brush the dust off of Benny's best suit as well as I could with my hand, and when I entered the hall Brother Marlow, who had preceded me, was making himself quite at home and was apparently none the worse for his last few hours' experiences. He had gone into the kitchen and lit his pipe from the fire in the cook stove and was now out in the hall sitting cross-legged in a rocker, great volumes of smoke emanating from his ministerial mouth, coming out in great rings, which rose above his head, whirling, circling, intertwining, interlapping, interlocking, collapsing and finally losing themselves in the surrounding atmosphere. He was making up for lost time and was the picture of contentment.

"Squire Brownlow and Benny soon came out with their pipes and, each borrowing a light from Brother Marlow, they joined in a general smoking bout. In those days matches were not so extensively used as now, the match industry being in its infancy, a box containing twenty-five matches selling for a dime. 'Borrowing a light,' therefore, was very common among smokers in those days. To borrow a light was easy—the Squire and Benny placing their filled but unlighted pipes to Brother Marlow's lighted one, the three giving a few vigorous puffs, and presto! the thing was done.

"Nell had resched a dresser and was standing before a mirror trying to rearrange her disordered hair and wiping the dust off of her little nose and from among the little crevices around her eyes.

"Nell, I said—probably because I didn't know just what else to talk about—'we did go fly! flying! to Pop and Benny, didn't we?'

"Yes, we sure did, Zeb,' she replied, 'and if you wake up in the morning, poor thing, and discover yourself bald-headed and minus a nose or other such facial protuberances, you can't blame me, can you, Zeb? I had to hold to something.'

"Certainly, Nell, I replied. 'I am only too glad that my nose was there for you to hold to. What else are noses for but to use in cases of emergency?'

"And do you know, Zeh,' she said, 'that when old Slick Selim jumped, that big gully you bit one of my fingers? Well, you did. That was when I let go of your mouth and grabbed hold of your ear.'

"Well, I'm sorry I bit you, Nell, I said. 'I hope you won't take hydrophobia, poor thing. But you can't blame me, can you, Nell? It was a clear case of involuntary—'

"Zebulum, will you have a light?" interrupted Brother Marlow, seeing that I had my pipe, ready filled, in my hand.

"I was about to borrow a light from the accommodating minister when, on looking out, I saw the sheriff and his party coming up the road. They were marching along up the lane, two abreast, the sheriff and the town marshal in the lead, the deputy and Solomon Wiggleford just behind them, with Highfield Jones and Bobby Broadway bringing up the rear, all coming in a brisk walk and keeping step, like trained infantry. As they got opposite the house Squire Brownlow also saw them.

"Hey, there!" he shouted, as he made a break for the front gate. 'Don't you know, confound you, that you can't do anything like that, by gum, while you are in the Foads Ferry country—pass right by a man's house at meal time without stopping?'

"By grit, Squire, answered the sheriff, 'the temptation is irresistible. What do you say, boys? Shall we tell the Squire to 'get behind us, Satan?'

"I warn you, though, Squire, it will be a regular cleaning up of your winter's food supply, for we are all as hungry as the six men from Bagdad. These scamps haven't had a square meal for a week."

"Well, get yourselves on in," said the Squire, pointing toward the house and after supper, by gum, I will get Benny to take you to Marion in the wagon."

"Squire Brownlow marched the six men into the house, then conducted us all into the dining room, where a table large enough to accommodate the whole crowd was spread. Squire Brownlow occupied the head of the table, Brother Marlow the foot and the rest of us, except Benny who had eaten his supper while we were down on the river, took seats along the sides. "After, Brother Marlow had returned thanks, the Squire told us to 'fall to,' and we did so, without further ceremony."

"In the absence of Dr. Gilliam, said the sheriff, 'I would drop a word of warning to Bobby against over-indulgence, owing to his recent convalescence. I don't want him to get to headquarters. 'Well, it is this way, Sheriff,' began Bobby, 'I—'

"Do you know, Nelly," interrupted the sheriff, 'that there is trouble ahead for a certain bridegroom in this crowd? Well, there is. The first time I go down to old Baalam Lightfoot's, by grit, I'm going to inform Miss Annie that Zebulum has not only married another girl, but that he is guilty also of impersonating herself. And what do you think he called you, Nell? Honey Bug? Sugar Lump? Not much. Spiced Preciousness? Not much. He called you a little yaller-haired flip of a thing. (hawl hawl hawl) He—'

"Sheriff, you may pass me another small leg of that fowl, if you will, by golly," interrupted the deputy, reflecting no doubt, that if he had a chance at the genuine Miss Annie Lightfoot he might be more successful in his suit than he was with the bogus article. "And you, Solomon," said the sheriff, 'may pass me another quarter section of that pie. This scamp of a deputy stole about half of that last batch.'

"It was the town marshal," spoke up the deputy, in self-defense. 'I saw him do it, by golly.'

"And Brother Highfield, you carve me another slice off the tenderloin of that chicken, if you will," said Brother Marlow, 'I have found, in doing ministerial work, especially where one has been exposed to considerable outdoor exercise, that there is nothing so invigorating to the inner and outer man as well-cooked barnyard fowl.'

"I suppose you will be at the Bourland school house next Sunday, Brother Marlow," said the sheriff, 'I admired your sermon last fourth Sunday on the proper mode of b—'

"I did too," interrupted Solomon Wiggleford, 'I think he knocked the black out of the subject. I never was much on going down into the—'

"Uncle Duke," interrupted Nell, 'Zeb and I will take a little wedding excursion up to see you next Sunday, if Zeb's knees are in proper shape, and we can go to hear Brother Marlow preach.'

"Do, Nelly," replied the sheriff. Keep his knees well saturated with St. Jacob's and come ahead. My son Kit can entertain Zebulum in any manner he wishes, from running a foot race to playing marbles.'

"And Brother Marlow," again spoke up Nell, 'it you have not already selected your text for next Sunday, please use this text: (Baptist Revision) "And a certain young man journeyed from a far country, fell among riotous officials and became famished for bread. And he faint would have filled his gastronomic vacuum with the shucks and cobs that the swine had left over. And he said, 'I will arise and go to my wife's father.' And it came to pass that his wife's father saw him coming afar off and ran to meet him, followed by the younger son. And the younger son said, 'Pop, what about the fatted calf?' And the father said, 'son thou hast been a good boy and hast stayed with me always, and hast devoured many a fatted calf. Go, therefore, and kill the fattest in the herd. Bring also a robe to put on him; for, behold, thy sister's husband has fallen among riotous associates, his knees shaketh with fatigue, his legs waxeth stiff and the robe thou lentest him to get married in is in tatters and he is ravenously hungry.'

"I think, Nell, I said, 'Brother Marlow will find that too long a text for one discourse. Here is one I think will suit him better (Baptist Revision) "And Rebekah looked and behold, Isaac was coming to meet her, riding a camel. And Rebekah said unto her uncle Lemon and to his men servants, 'Mount your dromedaries and hike you back home, for I must just fly! fly!' and Rebekah flew—"

"Both of these texts," interrupted Brother Marlow, 'are favorites of mine, and I am glad you have both been reading up on the later version, which, I think brings out the meaning more clearly and adds much to it in the way of beauty of thought and simplicity of construction. However, while I was down on the river I thought of a text which I think I shall use at Bourland next Sunday, as I believe it will suit a greater number of my congregation. The text is this: (Baptist Revision) "And Phillip said unto the eunuch, 'What must I do to escape the underworld? And the eunuch pointed out the scripture to him. And as they journeyed along, behold, they came to a place where there was much water, and Phillip said unto the eunuch, 'What's to hinder me from being immersed, here and now?' And Phillip and two of his household went straightway down into the—"

"Brother Marlow was interrupted by Benny, who came to the door of the dining room and cried out: "Ready! All read for Marion and way stations!" "We left the table at once, having all finished eating, except Highfield Jones, who, however, arose also, at the same time slyly putting a couple of quarter sections of cake into his pockets to eat on the way home.

"Benny had the wagon and team ready at the front gate and we all took our way out, going two abreast, the sheriff and Squire Brownlow, the town marshal and the deputy, Solomon Wiggleford and Brother Marlow, Benny and Bobby Broadway, Nell and Highfield Jones, while I brought up the rear alone.

"While the others were getting in the wagon Highfield Jones stepped over to where I stood. "Now, Zebulum," he said, 'when you're down about Crooked Creek, by gosh, come to see us. Lots of good fishing holes on the creek and I've got a pack of the fox-chasingest hounds in the country. And bring Nello with you. Susan is some talker—in fact, she don't give me a chance to make the few remarks I would like to make sometimes—and she could tell Nello lots of little things that have never been put down in her philosophy. She—'

"All aboard, Mr. Jones," interrupted Benny, as he made ready to start. The wagon moved down the road, Benny standing up in front driving the team the sheriff and the town marshal, the deputy and Solomon Wiggleford occupying the two spring seats, and Highfield Jones and Bobby Broadway standing in the back of the wagon, the latter holding to the tail of Highfield's coat to steady himself.

"Oh, goodness!" said Nell, as the wagon rattled down the road; 'I forgot something, as sure as my name is Nelly Brown—as sure as my name's Nelly Zimbulum—I forgot to tell Mr. Jones to include a new stovepipe for Brother Marlow, and also forgot to tell Benny to get a bottle of St. Jacob's. Stop'em! Stop'em!' she cried, running out to the road. "Hey, Benny! Oh, Mr. Jo-n-es-ee!"

"Nell's voice and gestures, however, were alike lost to the occupants of the wagon, and the vehicle rattled on. "That's all right, Nelly," said her father. "There is always a way out of every difficulty. We can take up a stovepipe collection for Brother Marlow next Sunday, and as for Zebulum, you can use turpentine or mutton tallow on his knees and such other places

WILLIAM ENOCH BELT.

Hurley-LaRue.

On Wednesday, Feb. 26, 1913, at four o'clock p. m., at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hurley of the Glendale section, Miss Cara Carter Hurley and Mr. Kehroy LaRue were united in marriage in the presence of only a few relatives (owing to the inclement day) by Eld. T. C. Carter of Marion. Miss Eattie Stallion a cousin of the bride was the maid of honor and Cecil LaRue, brother of the groom, was the best man. The bride's sister, Mrs. Mary Hurley played the wedding march. The bride wore a beautiful dress of white voile, handsomely trimmed while the groom wore the conventional black.

Immediately after the ceremony before congratulations were received, they repaired to the dining room where the table was tastefully arranged and an elegant three course supper was served. Thursday they went to the home of the groom's father, Lucian A. LaRue, the county surveyor, of the Deer Creek section, where a number of relatives and friends were given a splendid dinner in their honor.

Miss Clara has always been a favorite in her neighborhood and is one of the county's valued teachers. Mr. LaRue is a young farmer of splendid qualities very energetic and highly esteemed by all who know him.

They were recipients of many nice presents. May long life, happiness and prosperity be theirs.

PRESIDENT WILSON IS FOR JUSTICE ONLY

and virt. With this vision we approach new affairs. Our duty is to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil without impairing the good, to purify and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or sentimentalizing it. There has been something crude and heartless and unfeeling in our haste to succeed and be great. Our thought has been 'Let every man look out for himself,' let every generation look out for itself, while we reared giant machinery which made it impossible that any but those who stood at the levers of control should have a chance to look out for themselves. We had not forgotten our morals. We remembered well enough that we had set up a policy which was meant to serve the humblest as well as the most powerful, with an eye single to the standards of justice and fair play, and remembered it with pride. But we were very heedless and in a hurry to be great.

Chief Items in Program.

We have come now to the sober second thought. The scales of heedlessness have fallen from our eyes. We have made up our minds to square every process of our national life again with the standards we so proudly set up at the beginning and have always carried at our hearts. Our work is a work of restoration.

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered and here are some of the chief items: A tariff which cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests; a banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the government to sell its bonds fifty years ago and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits; an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and limits the opportunities of labor, and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country; a body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm, or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its practical needs; water courses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, unregarded waste heaps at every mine. We have studied as perhaps no other nation has the most effective means of production, but we have not studied cost or economy as we should either as organizers of industry, as statesmen, or as individuals.

Matters of Justice.

Nor have we studied and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity, in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men and its women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence. This is no sentimental duty. The firm basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality or opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women and children be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

These are some of the things we ought to do, and not leave the others undone, the old-fashioned, never-to-be-neglected, fundamental safeguarding of property and of individual right. This is the high enterprise of the new day; to lift everything that concerns our life as a nation to the light that shines from the hearthfire of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable that we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are or in blind haste. We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon; and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who question their own wisdom and seek counsel and knowledge, not shallow self-satisfaction or the excitement of excursions whither they cannot tell. Justice, and only justice, shall always be our motto.

Task Not One of Politics.

And yet it will be no cool process of mere science. The nation has been deeply stirred, stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instrument of evil. The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heart-strings like some air out of God's own presence, where justice and mercy are reconciled and the judge and the brother are one. We know our task to be no mere task of politics, but a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here must, not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I summon all honest men, all patriots, all forward-looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Gray of Salem, who formerly resided here.

Edd. D. Stone for County Judge.

Edward D. Stone in a speech on liberty and Education, and Legislation enactment, said: Till men have been sometime free, they know not how to use their freedom. Liberty is a dear word to a nation of thinking and industrial people. Education and rightfully training of the mind is a treasure that records the progress of all nations, for Liberty, fraternity, and equality. The French waded through seas of blood and tears and did a good many foolish things, the foolish things have been emphasized by historians, consequently many do not know that while the convention was maintaining the terror, it also instituted public education and so on.

Mr. Stone spoke of Legislation Laws, National good roads Associations and of state and county roads. Bear in mind that I am not a candidate for state Representative; he said, But I have been urged by friends to enter the race, but I do endorse good laws and good roads. Why not have a good reasoner and strong young man for county Judge. A subscriber. adv.

S. D. T. A. NEWS.

Now that the Stemming District Tobacco Association will soon be receiving tobacco at this place, it behooves every member to take a calm view of the situation and act on his better judgement and not on the impulse of the moment.

You all know that about one-third of the pooled tobacco is sold hence the payment is one-third cash and two-thirds in a warehouse receipt.

All the tobacco that shall remain unsold shall be put up by the Association and put on the market when it is in market condition. In the meantime it is your tobacco. It is looked after by men who are competent to handle it. It is covered by ample insurance. It is much safer than if it were in your own barn. The treasurer of the Association is one of the best banks in the district, the man that is to handle the whole business is not only a well known tobacco man of honor and integrity, capable to handle any phase of the business but is under ample bond to cover any loss that might arise.

The warehouse receipt that you will receive will be worth 100 cents on the dollar. If we will act sensibly and not knock on our own business they will be worth a good premium above that.

Even if we haven't gotten all that we ought to have had gotten for our tobacco, even if the business was not managed to just suit our individual notion, we are confident that the board did the best that could be done under conditions that existed, and time will prove that they acted wisely when we take into consideration all the circumstances.

So let us all take a calm view of the situation and act sensibly.

Whose Shoes Are They?

An esteemed correspondent, "J. B. McN.", in reading "Stories of The Town," seems to be puzzled over the ownership of the one dollar and a quarter pair of shoes donated by Highfield Jones. I can not, for the life me, see anything puzzling about those shoes. Highfield calculated it hurriedly, perhaps, yet he did it perfectly correct. To prove his correctness in the calculation I send you the following solution—a simple problem in mathematics.
Let x equal Nell's shoes.
Then x minus 10a plus b divided by 2 equals the price of Nell's shoes.
20a plus 2b plus 3 equals 2x.
Transposing and eliminating we have:
2x equals 20 plus 2 plus 3; or,
2x equals 25, or 2.5 dollars.
x equals $1.25, Nell's shoes.
See, by grab?

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

MY EXPERIMENTS WITH PAPER BAG COOKERY.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

When Soyer's paper bag method of cooking was first brought to my attention by friends, who, rightly or wrongly, seem to have a high opinion of my abilities as a cook, I admit that I was skeptical of its practicability. Indeed, I was more than that—I was rather firm in my belief that it could not prove out. But I was induced to put the system to a trial—and, lo and behold!—the very first trial made me an enthusiastic follower of M. Soyer. Since then I have been doing all my cooking by the Soyer method, and each succeeding day more than ever convinces me that any woman, simply by following Soyer's general directions, and using that good common sense and care which are essential to all good cooking, can master the Soyer paper bag method of cooking in a very short time, and will find it a great boon both to herself and to all the members of her household.

Following M. Soyer's general directions for paper bag cookery, I speedily learned that there are sundry commandments to be observed while pursuing his method of cooking.

The first and greatest of these is to get the right bag, which is made specially for cooking, is paraffined, odorless even when crumbly-erisp, sanitary and to be had in sizes big enough to hold a Thanksgiving turkey, or tiny enough for a single chop.

Next, nearly as important, is to grease the bag inside liberally, using butter, lard, oil, drippings or a very fat rind of bacon.

Further, proportion your bag-size to what it is destined to hold. The closer the fit of bag and contents, the better, and the more even and compact the lay of the food, the less trouble in handling.

Use a footed wire broiler, or very open grid-iron, in the oven. All paper bag cooking is done in the oven. If a gas oven, it must be lighted eight to ten minutes before putting in the food and kept at blazing heat until the bag corners sear lightly; then slacken the heat a third or even half throughout the rest of the time of cooking.

Be sure to lay the bags in the oven with the seam uppermost, especially if water has been put inside. Seams will steam open now and then—if the opening is downward there will be a leakage and much bother.

Finally, it is important to remember that all manipulation, seasoning and flavoring of food must be attended to before it is put in bags. There can be no stirring or tossing in the course of paper bag cooking. Nor must a bag be opened at any time during cooking; such action is absolutely unnecessary if directions are faithfully followed.

A PAPER BAG DINNER.

By M. Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Roast Beef, Round, Ribs, or Sirloin.—Grease well with drippings, but do not season. Put in bag, lay on a wire broiler, and cook in a moderate oven. For a three-pound joint allow forty-five minutes; for seven-pound, one hour and twenty minutes.

Lima Beans.—Take a quart of Lima beans, add two ounces of butter, four ounces of diced ham, a little sugar and salt, a good teaspoonful of flour, and a few sweet herbs to taste. Put in a paper bag with half a pint of water, seal up, and cook for an hour in a moderate oven.

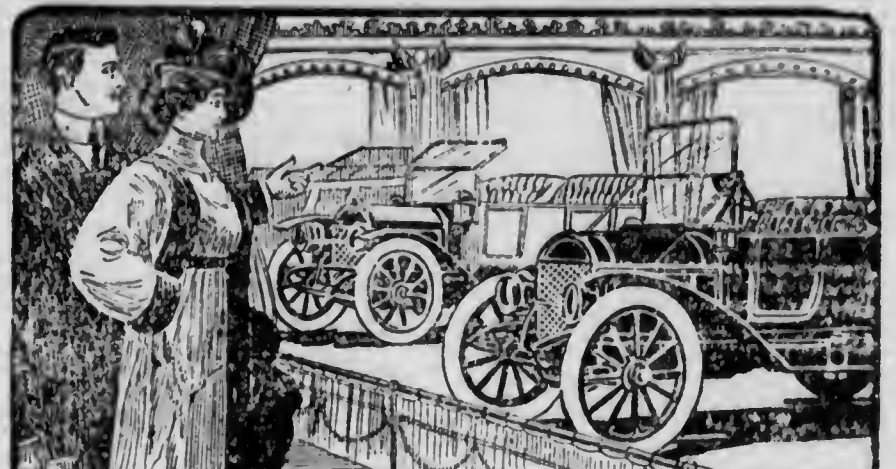

Baked Potatoes.—Thoroughly wash twelve good-sized potatoes. Make a few small slits in them, but do not peel. Place in a paper bag, with one tablespoonful of water. Seal and cook thirty-five to fifty minutes, according to size.

Tomatoes.—Place six tomatoes in boiling water for twenty-five seconds. Peel, butter your paper bag, put in tomatoes with salt, pepper, a suspicion of sugar, and a small piece of butter. Put the bag on the broiler after sealing, and cook for twelve minutes in a hot oven.

Apples à la Duchesse.—Wash and dry ten large apples. Core them, put stick-cinnamon—only a bit—in the place of each core, and pour over them a tablespoonful of rum. Put in a buttered bag, and bake on the broiler thirty minutes. When quite done, dish up, remove the cinnamon, and fill the centers with jam—strawberry, raspberry, or apricot. Cover with stiffly whipped cream, sprinkle with chopped nuts, and serve, or set on ice till wanted. Use sweet apples and let them cool before adding the jam and cream.

Light the gas range eight minutes before beginning to cook, or open the draughts so the coal range will be hot. Put the roast on first, upon the lowest shelf. Put the apples upon the upper shelf, so as to leave room for the tomatoes beside them. As soon as the tomatoes are done, remove, set the bag in a plate, and stand where it will keep hot. Put the Lima beans in the vacant place—and when the apples are done, remove them and put on the potatoes. Thus, you will be able to have the cooking come out even, also to chill and season your apples before sitting down to table.

Chronic Stomach Trouble Cured.

There is nothing more discouraging than a chronic disorder of the stomach. Is it not surprising that many suffer for years with such an ailment when a permanent cure is within their reach and may be had for a trifle? "About one year ago," says P. H. Beck, of Wakelee, Mich., "I bought a package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and since using them I have felt perfectly well. I had previously used any number of different medicines, but none of them were of any lasting benefit." For sale by all dealers. *m

The state legislature of Montana has passed a bill to submit a woman suffrage amendment, with only two dissenting votes in each house. If the rest of the people are so unanimous and a unanimous legislature is a fairly reliable straw as to the way public opinion is blowing—Montana soon will have joined the goodly company of Colorado, Wyoming, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, California, Utah, Arizona and Kansas the free states.

In Memory.

Mrs. Eliza Jane Bryant, wife of David Bryant, was born May 12th., 1846, and died at her home in this city at 9:30 p. m. February 10th., 1913, after a brief illness, aged a little more than 66 years.

Aunt Eliza professed faith in Christ when a mere child, and united with the Cumberland Presbyterian church. She lived and died, a faithful and much loved member.

She was in 1869 married to David Bryant, to this union was born nine children, all of whom died in infancy but three, and one of those at the age of sixteen, while she is survived by her husband, one son, Lee, Mrs. Will Glore and Mrs. Mary Barnes, the latter being a step-daughter, besides a host of friends and relatives.

To know Aunt Eliza was to love her. She numbered her friends by her acquaintances. She was to the motherless a mother; to the friendless a friend and to the down-hearted sunshine. Her sweet, quiet Christian life was an inspiration to those with whom she came in contact.

The relatives and friends desire to express to the many friends and neighbors their sincere appreciation for the kindness shown during the last sad hours. The funeral was conducted by Rev. W. T. Oakley from the family residence in the presence of a large and sympathizing crowd of friends and relatives. After which the remains were laid to rest in the new cemetery to await His second coming. Peace to her ashes, and may Divine blessings rest upon the entire family, and especially Uncle Dave, is the sincere prayer of her friend and pastor, W. T. Oakley.

The Forty Year Test.

An article must have exceptional merit to survive for a period of forty years. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was first offered to the public in 1872. From a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until it has attained a world wide reputation. You will find nothing better for a cough or cold. Try it and you will understand why it is a favorite after a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief—it cures. For sale by all dealers. *m the Bible rather encourages it. Take, for instance, the race between Cushi and Ahimaz, or the race between Lot and his wife—though, unfortunately, the latter lost out by looking back. The sacred historian rather intimates that she would have won out if she had not looked behind her. Therefore, if at any time you and Zeb should engage in the pastime, I warn you against the practice of looking back. Even though you should not turn to a pillar of salt, you would be in danger of falling down and perhaps injure yourself. However, for the last few years I have discontinued foot-racing, getting rather discouraged the last time I made a race with Kit. However, I can still run some, and if the Squire wants to try me from here to the front gate.

Stories of the Town.

"Oh, do! do! Pop!—a race! a race!" exclaimed Nell, jumping up and down excitedly. "Here," she went on, making a mark across the road with her little foot, "toe this mark, gentlemen, and wait till I count three."

"Squire Brownlow and Brother Marlow took the mark, I took their hats, Nell counted out one, two, three, and the race was on!"

"Down the road the two men went in full tilt, splitting the moonbeams wide open and leaving a cloud of dust behind them."

"Oh, look, Zeb! Zeb!—look at Pop!" exclaimed Nell. "Just look at Pop see how Pop's legs are flying!—my money's on Pop!"

"Hurrah, for Brother Marlow!—my bottom dollar is on the minister!" I cried out, as the two men raced on, neck and neck or rather nose and nose—and finally I heard them thump against the gate and the race was over.

"Brother Marlow wins!" I cried out.

"No, Zeb, it was Pop! Pop! Pop!" returned Nell. "Couldn't you see, Zeb dear, that Pop was in the lead?"

"Though at that distance I could not, for the life of me, determine which of the two men had won out, I readily agreed with Nell that of course Pop was really the winner, just as would have as readily agreed that the moon was a ball of green cheese."

"Pop is some runner, isn't he Zeb?" She said as we took our way, walking leisurely along, hand in hand toward the house. We were in no hurry. We had been in a hurry, by grab, most of the afternoon. Why keep it up? The moon shines so lovely and the dust feels so soft and nice under our feet, by grab, we'll take our time, I reflected. This is, after all a good world to live in.

"When we reached the gate Squire Brownlow and the minister had disappeared within the house, and we could hear them thumping around in the room, throwing their shoes under the bed and otherwise raising Cain in there, trying to drive the cat out."

"We passed through the gate and took our way up the leaf-strewn walk toward the house, our minds active enough but our mouths as silent as the two gate-posts, our tongues lying idly in their cozy headquarters, her little feet keeping step with my worn-out shoes, her soft little hand still clasped in mine, our two hearts thumping and pounding and cavorting away in perfect unison and, I might truthfully add, beating as one."

"Zeb, want you come in—awhile?" She asked, politely, yet shyly, doubtfully, as if she didn't know if it would be just the proper thing to do. "It isn't late, you know."

"I don't mind if I do, Nell, being as you have asked me to," I replied, meekly.

"We stepped upon the porch and just as we did so the cat, which had been dislodged from the Squire's room, came meowing out to where we were. 'Poor thing,' said Nell. 'It didn't want to be put out, did it, Zeb? May it stay in our room tonight, Zeb? If it gets to meowing in the night would you throw your shoe at it?'"

"No, I wouldn't, Nell, I promised, 'not even if it gets to holding high carnival. I've declared peace with all creatures here below, including the sheriff and his—'"

"Before I could reach a period, by grab, or even a comma, Nell—bless her little heart—"

At this point of Zebulum's narrative a barber, who had just finished shaving a customer, touched the story-teller on the arm, in a business-like way, and cried out:

"You are next, Zebulum!"

THE END.

ceremonies in honor of two chiefs of the opposition.

President Taft and President-elect Wilson rode together from the White House to the capitol, accompanied by two members of the congressional committee of arrangements. The vice-president-elect also rode from the White House to the capitol and in the carriage with him were the senate's president pro tempore, Senator Bacon of Georgia, and three members of the congressional committee of arrangements.

The admission to the senate chamber to witness the oath-taking of the vice-president was by ticket, and it is needless to say every seat was occupied. On the floor of the chamber were many former members of the senate who, because of the fact that they once held membership in that body, were given the privileges of the floor. After the hall was filled and all the minor officials of government and those privileged to witness the ceremonies were seated, William H. Taft and Woodrow Wilson, preceded by the sergeant-at-arms and the committee of arrangements, entered the senate chamber. They were followed immediately by Vice-President-elect Thomas R. Marshall, leaning upon the arm of the president pro tempore of the senate.

The president and the president-elect sat in the first row of seats directly in front and almost under the desk of the presiding officer. In the same row, but to their left, were the vice-president-elect and two former vice-presidents of the United States, Levi P. Morton of New York and Adlai A. Stevenson of Illinois.

When the distinguished company entered the chamber the senate was still under its old organization. The oath of office was immediately administered to Vice-President-elect Marshall, who thereupon became Vice-President Marshall. The prayer of the day was given by the chaplain of the senate, Rev. Ulysses G. H. Pierce, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, of which President Taft has been a member. After the prayer the vice-president administered the oath of office to all the newly chosen senators, and therewith the senate of the United States passed for the first time in years into the control of the Democratic party.

Procession to East Portico.

Immediately after the senate ceremonies a procession was formed to march to the platform of the east portico of the capitol, where Woodrow Wilson was to take the oath. The procession included the president and the president-elect, members of the Supreme court, both houses of congress, all of the foreign ambassadors, all of the heads of the executive departments, many governors of states and territories, Admiral Dewey of the navy and several high officers of the sea service, the chief of staff of the army and many distinguished persons from civil life. They were followed by the members of the press and by those persons who had succeeded in securing seats in the senate galleries to witness the day's proceedings.

When President Taft and the president-elect emerged from the capitol on to the portico they saw in front of them, reaching far back into the park to the east, an immense concourse of citizens. In the narrow line between the onlookers and the platform on which Mr. Wilson was to take the oath, were drawn up the endets of the two greatest government schools, West Point and Annapolis, and flanking them were bodies of regulars and of national guardsmen. The whole scene was charged with color and with life.

On reaching the platform the president and president-elect took the seats reserved for them, seats which were flanked by many rows of benches rising tier on tier for the accommodation of the friends and families of the officers of the government and of the press.

Mr. Wilson Takes the Oath.

The instant that Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson came within sight of the crowd there was a great outburst of applause, and the military bands struck quickly into "The Star Spangled Banner." Only a few bars of the music were played and then soldiers and civilians became silent to witness respectfully the oath taking and to listen to the address which followed.

The chief justice of the Supreme court delivered the oath to the president-elect, who, uttering the words,

Chief Justice White.

"I will," became president of the United States. As soon as this ceremony was completed Woodrow Wilson delivered his inaugural address, his first speech to his fellow countrymen in the capacity of their chief executive.

At the conclusion of the speech the bands played once more, and William Howard Taft, now ex-president of the United States, entered a carriage with the new president and, reversing the order of an hour before, sat on the left hand side of the carriage, while Mr. Wilson took "the seat of honor" on the right. The crowds cheered as they drove away to the White House, which Woodrow Wilson entered as the occupant and which William H. Taft immediately left as one whose lease had expired.

Senator-elect Ollie James shattered more precedents for the "Ollie James Club," of Marion, today. He took his home town delegation to the Treasury Department to be shown through that building. A policeman informed him the corridors were closed.

"Not to the men of Marion," said the Senator-elect, who at once interviewed the Secretary of the Treasury.

"They can go through if you go with them," said Mr. McVeagh, and so the deed was done. Later the delegation was shown through the White House by Mr. James. —Washington Telegram.

Rev. Miley Delivered Sermon.

It was our opportunity to hear Rev. Miley preach Sunday night, Feb. 16. And as, we went so impressed, with his discourse we wish to give the readers of the Press his text and a brief outline:

His text—II Kings:20:18. "What have they seen in thy house?"

1 Are the parents exercising parental control over their children?

2 Are you giving away to their wishes, and letting them lead you?

3 Is the family a unity co-operating and helping each other?

In making the application he made a strong appeal to the fathers and mothers to control their children.

It was a fine sermon, delivered in the spirit, with pathos and sentimental feeling. And made a deep, and we hope a lasting impression upon the minds and hearts of all who heard him.

He used a variety of illustrations. All bearing upon this important question—"What have they seen in your house? In your cities, on your streets, in your places of business?"

In the conclusion—The prophet Isaiah—Said unto Hezekiah thus saith the Lord.

Set thy house in order for thou shall die and not live.

The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained sediment. Hearing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended, I began using them. I was helped almost at once. "Where is Teddy?"

President Taft, during the inaugural ceremonies, sat with his good natured smile on his face and burst into a hearty laugh when a countryman in the crowd yelled: "Where is Teddy?"

President Wilson's voice at first failed to carry into the crowd, but as he raised it he secured close attention. Although he had memorized much of his address, he adhered closely to the reading of the manuscript.

When the inaugural party first appeared on the stand Speaker Clark advanced and shook hands with the incoming President, the crowd cheering wildly at this juncture.
